To Our Parents . . .

Your children are not your children.
They are the sons and daughters of Life's longing for itself.
They come through you but not from you,
And though they are with you yet they belong not to you.

You may give them your love but not your thoughts.
For they have their own thoughts.
You may house their bodies but not their souls,
For their souls dwell in the house of tomorrow, which you cannot visit, not even in your dreams.
You may strive to be like them, but seek not to make them like you.

For life goes not backward nor tarries with yesterday.
You are the bows from which your children as living arrows are sent forth.
The archer sees the mark upon the path of the infinite, and He bends you with His might that His arrows may go swift and far.

Let your bending in the archer's hand be for gladness;
For even as he loves the arrow that flies, so He loves also the bow that is stable.

We are guilty of many errors and many faults,
but our worst crime is abandoning the children,
neglecting the fountain of life.
Many of the things we need can wait. The child can not.

The curtains of life opened today,
And I saw a miracle happen.
There was no background of crashing orchestration,
Nor was there a dramatic narration.
Spectacular, glittering, magnificent stage sets?
None!
But the impact of this act, when done,
Gives a fleeting glimpse of infinity,
While yesterdays merge with today,
Thus creating tomorrow.
Yes, I saw a miracle happen-the birth of a child.
And knew at that moment,
Life is ours just to borrow.

Time,
Time,
Time, see what's become of me
While I look around for my possibilities.
I was so hard to please.
Look around,
Leaves are brown,
And the sky is a hazy shade of winter.
Hang onto your hopes, my friend,
That's an easy thing to say,
But if your hopes should pass away
Simply pretend that you can build them again...

"Would you tell me, please, which way I ought to go from here?"

"That depends a great deal on where you want to get to," said the Cat.

Lewis Carroll
ALICE IN WONDERLAND

He found most people perplexing: they did inexplicable things. Each sometimes reacted to life in ways he could not comprehend. He had sometimes thought, watching them, listening to them, that they were as mysterious as chemicals in an opaque bottle. Until the cork was removed, you never knew what they would do.

Silence is painful; but in silence things take form, and we must wait and watch. In us, in our secret depth, lies the knowing element which sees and hears that which we do not see nor hear. All our perceptions, all the things we have done, all that we are today, dwelt once in that knowing, silent depth, that treasure chamber in the soul. And we are more than we think. We are more than we know. That which is more than we think and know is always seeking and adding to itself while we are doing nothing - or think we are doing nothing. But to be conscious of what is going on in our depth is to help it along. When subconscious becomes consciousness, the seeds in winter-clad selves turn into flowers and the silent life in us sings with all its might.

Gibran

February 1975

Dear Members of the Graduating Class:

Each year graduation stimulates within me a wide range of emotions. I rejoice with you, am caught up in the excitement and exhilaration, the anticipation, the sense of release and of stepping over imaginary thresholds into a new world. There are also feelings of nostalgia; and memories of the past three years kaleidoscope through my consciousness as they do now as I write. Registration Day at 20 Charles St. three years ago seems both eons ago and as if it were yesterday. In just a few months as I sign each of your diplomas, I know that I shall experience once again that profound sense of respect for your accomplishments; something of an appreciation of the struggles, the disappointments, uncertainties, and the "up" times that you have experienced; and though wishing that I might have come to know each of you better, I give you my thanks for sharing with us and with each other such a precious part of your lives: learning, growing, developing, and experiencing new responses and ways of responding, and helping us to do the same.

Graduation, as Registration Day three years ago, is both an ending and a beginning. You have become a part of the fabric that is the M.G.H. School of Nursing. It spans the years, it transcends ephemeral differences, it captures in subtle design the intracacies, the flavor, uniqueness and special quality and contribution of each person and each Class. It has little really to do with black and white checks, and black shoes and stockings, but everything to do with continuity and the legacy which you are leaving for those who will follow you, just as you take with you a part of "M.G.H." and will always be a part of "M.G.H." The School is the better for having known you and for all that you have given to us. So most of all I am saying thank you: for the service to patients and dedication to their well-being; for helping the staff to benefit from your inquiry and your insights; and the myriad ways that you have helped the School as well as the Hospital to achieve its goals. Today happens to be Valentine's day so all the more reason that I tell you how much you have meant to us.

Thank you for sharing with us your frustrations, disgruntlements, exasperations, your ideas, expectations and hopes, but most of all thank you for your understanding, enthusiasm, perseverance and constructive help in making the School a better place to live and to learn in; and for the spirit of friendship and fellowship which you have helped to create within the school community. Your impact has been felt, you will be remembered.

Congratulations upon your achievements. We welcome you as colleagues in Nursing, and give you our very best hopes for years of fulfillment still to come.

Sincerely yours,

Mutalee Fitzgald

Look to this day for it is life the very life of life... In its brief course lie all the realities and truths of existence- the joy of growth, the splendor of action, the glory of power. For yesterday is but a memory And tomorrow is only a vision But today well lived, makes every yesterday a memory of happiness And every Tomorrow a Vision of Hope! Look well, therefore, to this day!

May this year bring you much happiness with just enough sorrow to appreciate your joys.

May you learn to be strong enough to face yourself when you are weak; and brave enough to face yourself when you are afraid; always be proud in honest defeat, and humble in victory.

May your wishes never replace your actions and may you realize that to know yourself is the cornerstone of knowledge.

Let your heart be clear, your goals high, and remember to master yourself before you seek to master others, learn to laugh but never forget to cry, reach into the future but never forget the past, remember to have a sense of humor that you may be serious yet never take yourself too seriously.

May you always have humility so that you may always remember the simplicity of true greatness, the open mind of true wisdom and the meekness of true strength.

The time has come for many of us to fully mature and try to cope in the world we have been preparing for thoughout the last three years. We suddenly have to become a responsible, independent part of society with motivation, initiative, creativity and perseverence. Overnight, we are supposed to set up our own objectives, carry out our duty with our own priorities and evaluate our abilities to function as a well-trained nurse in our own minds.

For many years--the rest of our lives, probably, as we change with time, there will always be a hint of MGH in our souls. We will always carry a hidden bit of pride in this institution, in our education, in our knowledge, in our abilities. We will reminisce about our past; our many insignificant mistakes throughout training, our thousands of exams and papers, the ever changing objectives and grades, our happy times...our disappointments...our long forgotten friendships which meant so much to us at the time.

I feel quite fulfilled having come to Mass. General for the most important years of my life, and proud to have met so many fantastic people like you. You just don't know how much each and every one of you has, in some way, become a part of me. I know I'm a better person by just knowing you, working with you, respecting you. I want you to know that you've all touched my life immensly.

Thank you for allowing me to grow with you, live with you, lead you and follow you.

"For without words, in friendship, all thoughts,
all desires, all expectations are born and shared,
with joy that is unacclaimed.
When you part from your friend you grive not;
For that which you love most in him may be clearer in his absence..."
